

ISLINGTON MHARS

A framework for mental health and resilience in schools

What is the iMHARS framework? How should my school use it?

The Islington MHARS framework sets out the components of school practice and ethos that effectively develop resilience, promote positive mental health and support children at risk of, or experiencing, mental health problems. The seven components have been distilled from a wide body of evidence and, alongside the supporting practices, have been developed and tested in Islington schools.

On each page of this booklet you will find a component alongside its supporting practices. You will also find ideas about how you can audit your school's work; the suggestions are not exhaustive but will enable you to start recognising effective practice and areas where there are gaps.

While reflecting on how the framework is embodied in your school you will need to consider how it meets pupils' differing needs through a 'stepped approach'.

A whole school, inclusive approach

The framework will be most effective when it is embedded in school culture and applied consistently across the whole school community.

Children and adults learn new ways of interacting, thinking and behaving when they observe and experience these consistently - from the classroom to the playground, at staff meetings, events and after-school clubs.

Everyone will benefit from this approach, and resilience breeds resilience: a resilient community enhances the resilience of its individuals and vice versa.

'Resilience does not come from rare and special qualities but from the everyday magic of ordinary human resources in the minds, brains and bodies of ordinary children, in their families and relationships, and in their communities.'

Ann Masten, University of Minnesota

A school that effectively supports pupils' mental health and resilience has...

A clear vision, and values that are understood and consistently communicated

Schools can achieve this through:

- A culture of mutual respect, recognition and affirmation, modelled by staff behaviour
- Leadership and school development that foster mental health and wellbeing
- Whole school policies and their consistent implementation
- Building pupils' sense of belonging and ensuring everyone feels safe within the school
- Creating opportunities for fun, laughter and relaxation
- Opportunities for pupils, parents, staff and governors to share their views and influence decisions

Find out what's happening in your school by:

- Comparing senior leaders', staff and pupils' understanding of the school's vision and values
- Conducting a learning walk to observe staff-staff, staff-pupil and pupil-pupil interactions
- Observing behaviour management strategies in the playground, dining hall and during lessons
- Conducting a survey to see how safe pupils feel in the school
- Interviewing a parent governor to understand how parents influence whole-school practices
- Comparing school councillors' and other pupils' perceptions of their involvement in school decision making

A school that effectively supports pupils' mental health and resilience has...

Support networks that enable pupils to develop social relationships

Schools can achieve this through:

- Teaching social skills, listening and empathy
- Developing pupils' ability to support each other
- Planned opportunities to socialise with different pupils and different people
- Teaching pupils to be able to ask for help
- Encouraging kindness, and understanding of the consequences of actions
- Supporting positive communication, including when using social media

Find out what's happening in your school by:

- Observing lessons to identify how teaching encourages social skills
- Running a focus group with pupils involved in peer support schemes, such as playground friends or peer mentoring
- Asking pupils to confidentially list three of their trusted peers, and analysing this to identify isolated pupils
- Asking pupils to draw and write who they would go to for help
- Analysing bullying data

A school that effectively supports pupils' mental health and resilience has...

Teaching and learning that develops resilient learners

Schools can achieve this through:

- Encouraging perseverance, risk taking and learning through mistakes
- Providing formative and meaningful feedback
- A variety of interactive teaching methods that engage all pupils
- Opportunities for collaboration and team work
- Providing all pupils with appropriate levels of challenge
- Teaching creative and systematic problem solving strategies

Find out what's happening in your school by:

- Speaking to a variety of staff to explore how their teaching supports pupils to make mistakes and be resilient
- Looking at marking and feedback in books
- Observing lessons to see how pupils respond when they find a task difficult
- Asking pupils to draw and describe the process they went through to learn a new skill
- Analysing the variety of questions teachers use in different lessons

A school that effectively supports pupils' mental health and resilience has...

A curriculum that teaches life skills, including social and emotional skills

Schools can achieve this through:

- A planned comprehensive PSHE education curriculum
- Opportunities for pupils to identify emotions, and develop strategies to manage and communicate them
- Building pupils' sense of their own identity, including their qualities, likes, hopes, and values
- Developing pupils' critical thinking skills and encouraging reflection
- Providing high quality enrichment activities
- Opportunities for pupils to volunteer within the school and the local community

Find out what's happening in your school by:

- Analysing pupil progress in PSHE
- Asking pupils to list the personal qualities that are valued by the school
- Observing lessons to see how they encourage critical thinking skills
- Mapping all pupils' involvement in enrichment activities
- Interviewing pupils about how the school prepares them for adult life

A school that effectively supports pupils' mental health and resilience has...

Specific help for vulnerable pupils

Schools can achieve this through:

- All staff, pupils and parents understanding risk factors for mental health problems; and the identification, referral and support system
- Early identification of pupils with emotional and mental health needs
- Careful joint planning to meet individual pupils' needs
- Effective recording and monitoring of pupil progress
- Established school systems, practices and interventions
- Partnership working with a range of specialist agencies to support whole school practice and pupils with complex concerns

Find out what's happening in your school by:

- Talking to individual staff to ascertain their understanding of particular vulnerable pupils' needs
- Running a focus group with pupils that attend a support group
- Reviewing exclusion, attendance, equalities, special educational needs and pupil premium data
- Critiquing the 'journey' of a particular pupil through the school's pastoral care system
- Interviewing external agencies to understand how the school works in partnership

A school that effectively supports pupils' mental health and resilience has...

Effective partnerships with parents

Schools can achieve this through:

- Joint planning and decision making with each child's parent
- Providing appropriate support for those parents identified as needing additional help, encouraging them to access further support
- Regular, meaningful communication
- A range of inclusive activities that support all parents to feel welcome and part of the school community
- Working in partnership with parents and carers to promote pupils' social and emotional wellbeing

Find out what's happening in your school by:

- Hosting an event with parents to raise awareness of mental health, and use this as an opportunity to gather parent perspectives on partnerships with the school
- Conducting a parent survey
- Analysing attendance at school events
- Interviewing individual parents about how the school has supported them and their child
- Using a graffiti wall with a variety of staff (administrative staff, support staff, teachers) to understand their involvement with parents

A school that effectively supports pupils' mental health and resilience has...

Support and training for all staff to build skills, capacity and own resilience

Schools can achieve this through:

- Enabling and supporting all staff to respond appropriately to pupils' emotional needs
- Actively promoting and supporting staff wellbeing and self-care
- Training staff to increase understanding of mental health and complex trauma
- Effective staff professional development, including opportunities for shared reflection
- Consistent, positive and effective management
- Building supportive and trusting relationships amongst staff

Find out what's happening in your school by:

- Running a staff focus group to gather perspectives on staff support, wellbeing and training. Ensure the focus group includes a broad range of staff (e.g. administrative staff, support staff, teachers and the caretaker)
- Conducting a staff survey to explore levels of morale and staff wellbeing
- Analysing staff attendance on a monthly basis
- Looking at which members of staff have accessed training
- Interviewing a member of the senior leadership team to explore staff management and decision making
